

Slain Monarch Held Reins Of Portuguese Government For Nearly Twenty Years

Son of King Luiz I Saw
Peace and Terror
During Reign.

Carlos I was born September 28, 1863, being the son of King Luiz I and his Queen, Maria Pia, daughter of the late King Victor Emmanuel of Italy. He was married May 22, 1886, to Maria Emile, daughter of Philippe Duc D'Orleans, and succeeded to the throne on October 19, 1889. His heir, also assassinated, Prince Luiz Philippe, the Duke of Braganza, was born March 2, 1887. Prince Emmanuel, the second son, was born November 15, 1889.

The reigning dynasty of Portugal belongs to the house Braganza, which dates from the end of the fourteenth century, at which period Alfonso, an illegitimate son of John I, was created by his father, Count of Barcellos and Duke of Braganza. When the old line of Portuguese Kings of the house of Avis became extinct by the death of Sebastian and of his successor, King Henrique, Philip II of Spain became King of Portugal by means of his defense of a Portuguese princess.

Revolt Comes.

After sixty years' union under the same kings with Spain, the people of Portugal revolted and proclaimed the then Duke of Braganza, King, he being the nearest Portuguese heir to the throne.

Related to Many.

The full name of the murdered King was Charles Ferdinand Louis Marie Victor Michael Raphael Gabriel Gonzagues Xavier Francis d'Assise Joseph Simon. He was related to many kings and, as a writer aptly put it, he could hang up his hat in any royal house in Europe and feel at home.

His mother, Maria Pia, was sister of the late King Humbert, and his father was the son of the German Prince Ferdinand of Saxe-Coburg Gotha, and first cousin of the late King and Queen of England.

King Carlos was known as the fattest king in the world. He was stout than King Edward and the latter weighs more than the King of the Belgians, who is six inches taller. Carlos had a gigantic appetite for which polite writers give credit to Queen Amelie, who gained a wide reputation as a cook.

During a visit to England in 1892 Carlos made himself very popular with various house parties at which he was entertained.

Had Many Talents.

Not only was he noted as one of the best shots in Europe, but he was a keen motorist, a clever painter, and a good musician. When the days and evenings were spent in the study of French love songs and Portuguese ballads. He usually accompanied himself on the piano and did various other little bits of entertaining that made him quite valuable to his hosts.

That the agitation against the King was not of recent date was well known. As far back as 1898 Carlos feared for his life. At that time anarchists in Portugal and various other countries became active, so much so that a plan was discussed freely by these countries looking toward the suppression of anarchy.

Many stories found their way out of Portugal of the alleged neglect by the King of his popular wife, Queen Amelie, for younger and more beautiful faces in his kingdom. At one time a lengthy account was sent across the water of a tragedy involving a then noted physician, the latter's wife, and a young member of the court circles.

Intrigue Laid Bare.

The dispatches told of the intrigue in detail and frankly stated that, while the newspapers in Portugal refrained from printing any more than the bare facts in the case, the journals of all Europe were full of the harrowing details. This tragedy was laid at the door of the vanity of Portugal's King and its reward detailed the attitude of the Queen toward these plain favorites of her consort with sympathetic restraint.

WIDOWED QUEEN IS NOTED FOR LEARNING AND BEAUTY

Queen Amelie of Portugal is known as a beautiful and exceedingly clever woman. She is the only princess in Europe who has taken a degree of medicine.

Queen Amelie of Portugal is one of the handsomest princesses in Europe. She is thirty-six years old, but looks younger, and was always a favorite in aristocratic society. She was born at Teikensham, England, during the exile there of her parents, the Comte and Comtesse of Paris. The Queen is a clever and gifted woman, of many accomplishments. She practices medicine with decided success in a select circle and among the poor of Lisbon.

Queen Amelie proudly wears the Golden Rose, the emblem of the mystic Papal order, bestowed upon her by Pope Leo XIII for her good work for the Catholic Church and for charity in Portugal. This emblem is possessed by only three other princesses in Europe and by Miss Gwendolyn Caldwell, of Baltimore, May 22, 1886. Amelie was married to the Duke of Braganza, the prince royal.

Her sisters are the lovely Duchessa d'Aosta, the Duchess de Guala, and the Princess Louise of Orleans, yet unmarried. Her brothers are the Dukes of Orleans and Montpensier, and it is said that the reconciliation which has taken place between the former and King Edward anent the duke's indiscreet utterances about the disgraceful caricatures of Queen Victoria was due to the tactful intercession of Queen Amelie, who, like her consort, is on terms of the most intimate friendship with King Edward and Queen Alexandra.

The Queen has two sons, the Duke of Braganza, nearly fourteen years old, and the Duke of Beja, who is twelve years of age. The one is destined for the army and the other for the navy, the latter being also the profession of the father, who is, like King Edward, passionately fond of the sea.

Next year he will again race for the famous Vasco de Gama Cup, won this year by Rupert Guinness with his yacht Leander. King Carlos having for the purpose purchased the Banshee, formerly owned by Colonel MacMahon, and now being "fitted at Lisbon and renamed the Amelie. King Carlos, by the way, was related to the English royal family, his grandfather being Prince Ferdinand of Saxe-Coburg, cousin of the late Prince Consort. Curiously enough his birthday was on the same day as that of his wife.

ROOSEVELT READY TO ANSWER CRITICS

President Roosevelt has completed the preparation of a public statement intended to refute recent charges of Senators and other anti-Administrationists that he was using Federal patronage to assist in the securing of Taft delegates to the next Republican National Convention. He has not decided the form in which it is to be issued but the present intention is to make it an open letter.

No attempt will be made to meet the criticism that the President is siding the Taft candidacy, for Roosevelt has openly advocated the nomination of the War Secretary, but it will be shown that officeholders who have been assisting other Presidential candidates have not been molested. Neglect of duty alone, it will be pointed out, is the only act that will bring dismissal.

Carlos and Son Loved Dangers Of Boar Hunt

King Trained His Heir, and Both Had Many Trophies.

King Carlos from the time of his boyhood had been famed as a boar hunter. He was passionately fond of the sport and many tales are told of his prowess with the lance when he was in his athletic prime. The crown prince, like his father, was fond of the hunt, and never lost an opportunity to participate in the sport that since the early ages has been followed by the royalty and nobility of all Europe.

King Carlos and the crown prince had many trophies of their prowess, of which they were both proud. The royal palace contained a number of mounted specimens, heads and skins of boars of unusual size that had been brought to earth with a lance thrust from the hands of father and son. Both were adepts with the knife and revolver, and had many narrow escapes from precarious positions.

It will be recalled that on December 4, 1906, both the King and the crown prince narrowly escaped death from a herd of wild boars. Their peril on this occasion caused such a fear in the ministry that pressure was brought to bear by the King's ministers to prevent him again jeopardizing his life. The King, with several of his court, was enjoying a hunt. The beaters had driven a herd of boars from the thicket and the party was endeavoring to dispatch the quarry with lances, when the boars made a rush.

The horses upon which the King and crown prince were mounted, took flight and unseated their riders. The King and his heir were on the ground in a dangerous position, when the attention of the fleeing animals was averted just in time for Carlos to escape. The cavalry company which was a part of the King's escort, hastened to the rescue, and killed the boars with sabers, but not before King Carlos' horse, which had fallen, was so cut up that it had to be shot.

The King never failed to follow boar hunting, and gave frequent hunts in the royal preserves. Many times these hunts caused apprehension in the court, but not until the King's great peril, a few years ago, did the ministry summon courage to exercise its influence against the King indulging in this pleasure.

Carlos and his son, whom he himself trained, showed remarkable prowess, and were both cool in the face of danger. Their feet frequently held agents members of other royal families of Europe, who, although invited, did not desire to take an active part in the chase.

BRIDE, DIVORCEE, AND BRIDE AGAIN, ALL IN A DAY

GREENSBORO, N. C., Feb. 1.—Mrs. Noah H. Smith possesses the distinction of having been the bride of one man, his divorced wife, and then the wife of another man, all in the same day. As Mrs. Newton, a bride of a few months, she sued for divorce from her husband, who got into trouble shortly after his marriage, and is now serving a term in the State penitentiary. The divorce decree was signed in the morning. On the evening of the same day she became the bride of Smith. Mrs. Smith is a daughter of Benjamin Ellis, who lives in the northern part of the county.

Queen Amelie of Portugal

Assassinated Crown Prince Idol of His Mother's Heart And Revered in All Europe

Decorated by King Edward Who Admired
Intellect and Gentleness.

No member of the royal families of Europe was more popular than Luiz Philippe, the twenty-year-old crown prince of Portugal. He was idolized by his mother, and reasonably so. The real introduction of Luiz Philippe to the European royalty took place at the ceremonies attending the coronation of King Edward, when the young prince was fifteen years old. Previous to that time he had rarely left his own country. His mother, always solicitous, always fearful that harm might come to him, would never consent that he accompany herself and the King on their various visits to other cities.

Directed His Education.

Queen Amelie superintended his education and that of his younger brother, teaching them their lessons herself, and taking the keenest delight in acting as their instructor. But when King Edward's coronation took place the young crown prince of Portugal went to London to represent the country over which his father ruled. He was very much impressed by the manner in which King Edward received him, and when he went into the room, said the prince, "the King was sitting down. As soon as he saw me he immediately rose and embraced me, and asked after father and mother. He told me he was very fond of my family and my country, and had a great liking for me, and thanked me for coming to his coronation. As he said these words, he kissed me very tenderly."

Decorated by Edward.

Shortly after this visit to the King, and before the coronation ceremonies, the prince was waited upon by the Prince of Wales, at the request of King Edward, and the prince's commissioner from his father's country was decorated with the Order of the Garter, one of the highest marks of favor in the gift of kings of England. When this great mark of favor from the King was poised through royal circles, the young prince was lionized by society, and soon found himself its idol. Subsequently at one of the royal dinner parties all the men in the room were smoking. Some one said to the young prince:

"Won't you have a cigar?"
"No," said his fifteen-year-old royal highness, "I'm too small yet."

The young prince of the reigning house had his own gymnasium in the palace in Lisbon, and everything for their comfort and health was provided.

PUNTA ARENAS, Feb. 1.—Admiral Evans' battleship fleet arrived in this harbor at 1 o'clock this afternoon, and were welcomed by a salute from the cruiser Chacabuco, which arrived here last week with the Chilean Minister Hicks and several Chilean government officials to extend a welcome to the Americans on behalf of the South American republic.

The fleet is to remain here five days and will be preceded through the Western Straits by the torpedo flotilla, which is expected to arrive before the battleships have finished coaling. Some interest was taken in a report that two Japanese spies had arrived here on a British steamer to observe the movements of the American battleships, but the two suspects have disappeared and cannot be located.

JUST LIKE A WOMAN.

Two ladies who had not seen each other for years, recently met in the street. They recognized each other after a time, and their recognition was cordial.
"So delighted to see you again. Why, you are scarcely altered at all."
"So glad, and how little changed you are. Why, how long is it since we met?"
"About ten years."
"And why have you never been to see me?"
"My dear, just look at the weather we have had."—Tit-Bits.

LOYD PROPOSES CHICAGO AS BASE OF OPERATIONS

Would Remove Headquarters of Democratic Congressional Committee.

It was reported last night that it is the intention of Representative Lloyd, should he be chosen chairman of the Democratic Congressional Committee, to remove the headquarters of the committee from Washington to Chicago.

There is some strenuous opposition to such a program, those who oppose it holding that Washington is pre-eminently the place from which to direct the campaign. They point out that Washington is naturally the political center of the country, and that the Washington correspondents are the best equipped men in the country for the dissemination of political news. These men have a wide acquaintance with public men and public matters, their years of work at the seat of government enabling them to handle national politics better than the newspaper men of any other city.

Practically every important paper in the country has a regular correspondent in Washington. These facts, in conjunction with the fact that Washington is the place where the material for campaigns is to be gotten together, in the estimation of the Washington advocates, makes it highly important that the headquarters should not be removed. Representative Flood advocates Washington for headquarters with a branch office in New York. Mr. Flood and Representative Bowers is not enamored with the idea of removing them to the Windy City.

Another objection that the opponents of Mr. Lloyd are making to his selection is the fact that if the speech of Representative Shackelford counts for anything it means that Missouri is setting herself to getting everything in the next House. If Mr. Lloyd should be elected and the plan put forth by Mr. Shackelford to elect Champ Clark Speaker and Judge De Armond floor leader, should carry, Missouri would have the three best places within the gift of the party in the House. Many Democrats who believe that Mr. Clark should be made Speaker in the event of Democratic success, and who would be willing to see Judge De Armond made floor leader, declare that it would be preposterous to give all three places to Missourians.

It is confidently claimed by the opponents of Mr. Lloyd that he can never muster a majority of the committee, and that the headquarters will remain in Washington. The friends of Representative Flood claim he will be chosen on the first ballot, but that should he not be he will inherit all the anti-Lloyd strength, which would insure his election.

FORAKER SCORES THE PRESIDENT AT OHIO DINNER

Declares "Muck-Raking"
Responsible for Financial Conditions.

NEW YORK, Feb. 1.—United States Senator Foraker was the principal speaker tonight at the annual dinner of the Ohio Society, held in the Waldorf-Astoria. Other speakers who had things to say were John D. Archbold and Justice Judson Harmon.

The speech of the Senator from the Buckeye State was a resume of the industrial conditions. For the situation in business and the general feeling of distrust he laid the greater part of the blame at the feet of President Roosevelt.

Mr. Foraker spoke of overcapitalization, overexpansion, and other causes, but declared the chief causes could be summed up in the one word "muck-raking."

After tracing the campaign against the trusts through the newspapers and from the rostrum, he added:
"In the midst of all, and over all, was heard the voice of the President. Conceding that he meant well, his denunciations of predatory wealth, of swollen fortunes, of the criminality successful, and of the bad corporations, were of such declamatory and frightened character that they not only increased the general dissatisfaction, but helped to create a general business distrust and alarm."

"He, himself, recognizing this fact, facetiously remarked that a mere statement from him, that he was determined to punish and break up any kind of an offense, was enough to start a run on the banks. It was not so bad as he thus indicated, but it was bad enough and the result was inevitable."

"Since the muck-raking articles have been at a discount one of the most significant evidences of improvement in the public mind, as well as in conditions, is found in the fact that the President's message of Friday, although it caused some advance alarm and proved to be one of the fiercest ever sent to Congress, yet instead of producing a bad effect on values, seemed to stimulate the market. This was doubtless due to the fact that the whole country realizes that, as the months pass, and the end draws nearer and still nearer, Congress grows correspondingly more independent, while the power of the Chief Executive as constantly wanes."

John D. Archbold's speech was mainly a defense of Rockefeller. He avoided any reference to President Roosevelt.

YOUR HELP IS NEEDED

Response to the appeals recently published by the Joint Finance Committee in behalf of the Associated Charities, the Citizens' Relief Association, and the Committee on Prevention of Consumption has been encouraging, but by no means sufficient.

There is still needed for the three charities something more than $17,000.

Distress is unusually severe among the poor. Need for help is urgent.

Small subscriptions are welcome, as well as larger gifts. Will you send a contribution to
